Nan Xiang has been a feature of the Sultan Hotel long enough for it to immediately spring to mind when considering a venue for a Chinese meal. And it is a great choice, complete with the understated elegance of its oriental décor and its reputation as a specialist in Shanghai cuisine, which is characterised by highly-flavoured sauces made from ginger, sugar, Shaoxing wine and soy. Somehow the sugar mysteriously becomes a secret ingredient that effuses the sauces with a taste that is savoury rather than sweet. With prompt assistance from the attentive staff, regular visitors are usually quick to select the restaurant's famous Steamed Bun or Xiao Long Bao as appetisers, in particular the Xiao Long Bao with Crab Egg for a crisp and Deep Fried Shrimp Ball Filled with Crab Roe. Other recommendations include Drunken Chicken ala Shanghai. Moving on to main courses, poultry is at its finest here, with Fried Duck Shanghai Style being top choice for a hearty and fulfilling meal. Seafood fans will be happy too, with Live Seafood of Baked Fish being one of the highlights here. With fine wines to complement the cuisine, the dining experience at Nan Xiang is certainly memorable.
